

ABSTRACT

A roller structure for a computer mouse has a roller member with a concave portion formed on a circumference surface thereof. The concave portion is concaved from top to bottom of the circumference surface of the roller member to form an arcuate shape. Furthermore, the roller structure can be provided for ergonomics and a simple design, and to decrease operational injuries to a user's finger.